How To Choose the Best Agile Project Management Software

Some of the most important features for Agile project management can be found in all-in-one project management apps. Consider how your team works and what it needs before choosing a specific Agile project management app or something more flexible that can work for multiple departments.

Essential Features

Kanban board: Cards devoted to tasks that can be moved from column to column keep sprints organized and show progress at a glance. This is helpful for managing backlogs, tasks and running sprints.

Task management: This is a feature you should find in any project management system. Without it, you won't be able to track the progress of work or who's doing what.

In-app communication: Whether it's chat, comments or audio, it's important to have some form of communication in the platform to reduce back-and-forth communication via email or meetings.

Reporting: Most project management software include pre-built or custom reports, so you can track a variety of data in relation to your projects. This can help you head off issues at the pass or see where some people may be at capacity, for example.

Ease of Use

Depending on your team's experience with project management software, it's best to choose a simple platform. The easier it is for new users to adopt software, the more likely they are to continue using it.

Methodology

At Forbes Advisor, we do everything possible to bring you the fairest reviews of software. In fact, we have specific methodologies in place to ensure we perform the research, hands-on testing and deep dives into user reviews to ascribe a one through five ranking to each platform.

To determine the best Agile project management software, we considered the same factors as in our best project management software, but we narrowed the scope a bit. If a provider doesn't offer Kanban or Scrum boards, we nix it from the list. We also considered flexibility, Gantt charts and overall ease of use. This is the breakdown of how we scored each title:

- Pricing and fees (8%): Pricing is always going to be a huge factor for small businesses, which is why we give it 8% of the total score.

Project management features (28%): Project management features include a variety of factors including the ability to assign roles to users, utilize various views (Kanban, Gantt, etc.) and create roadmaps. We assigned 28% of the ranking to this section because it's what makes Agile project management what it is.

Organizing features (15%): Organization features make up 15% of the score and include extras, such as subtasks, milestones, multiple assignees and task IDs.

Technical features (19%): We evaluated providers based on their technical features, such as the availability of a mobile app, task automation, advanced search function and more.

Collaboration features (7%): We reviewed each provider for its ability to generate proofs and invoices, integrate with a variety of third-party applications and work collaboratively on documents, to name just a few factors from this category.

Ratings and reviews (5%): We considered what users have to say about each platform, both positive and negative reviews, on reputable user review sites.

by using each app. Ten percent of the score is dedicated to ease of use, value, popularity and standout features.
